Frontier Southwest by James K. Greer

Arriving in Texas in 1836 but just missing the famous battles of the Texas Revolution, nineteen-year-old Hays soon had Sam Houston urging him to join a new group of Rangers. His time with the Texas Rangers soon came to an end. He tolerated it as long as the cub remained senseless, but when the bear woke up and began biting his hindquarters, Bally began bucking in earnest, much to Hays's amusement. Finally, Gator was thrown and the horse took off, never to be seen again.

Rangers of the Republic of Texas

At twenty-three Hays was commissioned a captain, and between skirmishes and battles his survey party marked out much of the area around San Antonio. Frontiersmen from states such as Kentucky and Tennessee were noted for their knowledge of frontier defense. Jack Hays cut quite an extraordinary figure.
