The mirrour of mutabilitie, or Principall part of the Mirrour for magistrates Describing the fall of diuers famous princes, and other memorable personages. Selected out of the sacred Scriptures by Antony Munday, and dedicated to the Right Honorable the Earle of Oxenford.

The unnam'd Authour as in all a raylor Ocasion takes to abuse me and John Taylor With Herbert, but wherefore I cannot telle Nor he himselfe that wrote it very well, For he is one whom though his will were bent, Wanteth abilitie for his intent : And yet he could in his bare garden stufte, Which with Tobaco I doe take in snuffe Take liberty to name me in his leeres But in his workes such plaine uonsence appeares That I account his pen to be no slander.

Let me dye with the Philistines, and so the house fel down and killed them all, his body by his Bretheren was taken and buried with his Father Manoath. A man knows what his beginning is: but he knoweth not his ending. There as I lay reposed on the ground Delighted with its oderiferous smell The heavenly Quiristers about me round Made musicke which did please my senses well ; Especially the lovely Philomel.

Anthony Munday (Munday, Anthony, 1553

The first of the novelists who had no university training, he was reading romances of chivalry, writing ballads, working as a printer's apprentice, and possibly acting on the stage while Lyly, Gosson, and others were absorbing the euphuistic lectures of the Oxford Greek Reader John Rainolds. But there he lies and mery makes, he doth no hurt at all : Then Adrian doth strayght commaunde his men them forth to call, And doth commaund that they be put in Ore of brasse to die : But nought they care, in Jesus Christ they had their trust wholly.

Edmund Spenser: An Hymne in Honour of Beautie.

The food was very fine indeed, beginning with antipasto of meat, Spanish anchovies or syrup of stewed prunes and raisins. Now are his books rejected, and his fancy followed: his study banished, and the Gentlewoman dutifully served Who alas although he were her superior: of her was regarded, as her far inferior.
