. I see commentators going up and down among them, and yet neither agreeing on the subject to which the whole is to be referred, nor disentangling the words with any simple plan. But a contextual examination establishes a relationship between the preceding context and the royal birth announcement of verse 6.

Isaiah and the Glory of the Preincarnate Christ

. Let our souls rely on him, and rejoice in him; then, for his sake, the Father will be well-pleased with us. Not merely by his essence or power, who is every where; or by his providence supporting, preserving, observing, ordering, and overruling all things; but in a way of special grace, to guard and protect his people, support and supply them, comfort and strengthen their hearts; wherefore they need not fear any of their enemies, nor whatsoever they may be called to suffer for his name's sake, even though they pass through fire and water, and the valley of the shadow of death: be not dismayed, I am thy God; through Christ, in a covenant way, as appeared by the effectual calling of them; and therefore might depend on his love, be sure of his power, expect all needful supplies, and to be comfortably carried through every service and trial they were called unto; and need fear no enemies, or be dismayed at anything that should befall them; or become weak as water, and their hearts melt like wax within them, as the Jewish commentators generally interpret the word {n}.

This is a prophecy of the coming Messiah. It is inconceivable that a humble prophet like Isaiah should have applied to himself a description expressive of so much importance as is here attributed to the servant of God.

The Targums

It is of some interest that, when Isa. This does not mean Jesus or his followers pre-existed. Editor, with Jacob Neusner Trading Places
